1. After long deliberation, the USSR and Communist China have decided upon the following policy:

A. Objectives:

- a. To mass all strength to start a war to defeat the capitalist bloc led by the U. S.
- b. To occupy Korea and Japan.
- c. To liberate Southeast Asia.

B. Military plans:

- a. To use overwhelming force to push the UN forces in Korea to the south and to annihilate them when they are unable to hold the Pusan bridgehead.
- b. To mobilize a large fleet to be held ready in Vladivostok, and to use strong naval, ground and air forces.
- c. To use captured Soviet-trained Japanese troops to cross the Tsushima Strait, join the Japanese Communist underground and liberate Japan.

- C. These objectives are to be realized before Western rearmament of Japan and Germany and during the absence of solidarity among the UN member states, especially the U.S., Britain and France.

2. Following the defeat of the North Korean armies by the UN forces, the Soviet Far East Command at Poli (Khabarovsk) began to move Soviet troops into the Maritime Province (? and to prepare) for a stand in the Lake Baikal Military District. During the past two months (? however) Ma-lih-so-ko-fu*, the Soviet commander of the Maritime Province Military District, moved ten divisions including tank divisions, mechanized infantry divisions and cavalry and artillery units into the Hunch'un (130-22, 42-52) area. The Far East Headquarters moved six divisions into the general area between Muleng (130-15, 44-32) and Yanchi (129-31, 42-55). Ten divisions were moved from Baikal to the Hallar-Harbin area.
